

Lesbians Can (and do) Change Back to Normality

Written by K B Napier

Friday, 13 February 2015 13:52

This is a story about a woman who gave up being a lesbian (something gays and lesbians deny because they want us to believe their condition is inborn). She did not become a Christian, but her story is typical of so many who claim that homosexuality is 'natural' and 'right'. It is a story about a young woman who suddenly looked at herself in the mirror and said: "You are such a fool – you have lost your grip on reality!" from that moment she wanted to get rid of her sexual habit, which she herself calls 'perverse'.

What her story shows is something fundamental: both male and female homosexuality is a personal choice and not something a person is born to! And just as a woman can choose to become 'lesbian' so she can choose to undo her unfortunate choice and return to normality. This is the belief of one such 'lesbian', as reported in a newspaper.

Actress Jackie Clune was a 'normal' sinful girl as a youngster, and slept with her boyfriend for several years. But, when she went to university (a place where many youngsters lose their senses and learn to sin big-time) she joined a feminist movement and this quickly led to her first lesbian affair.

She says that when she went with her first woman, it was terrifying and felt unnatural. This should not be surprising because it is unnatural! She felt odd, but liked the idea of being daring. So she continued and got deeper into lesbianism. I have been told, time and again, by male and female homosexuals, that they knew what they did was 'unnatural'. The only reason they say differently in public is that they want legal recognition of them as being 'natural', so they can batter Christians with the law.

After five years she revealed her choice to her parents, who, she says, were devastated at first. It took them a long time to 'accept' her as she was. (I doubt if they truly accepted it at all; parents of homosexuals do not want to lose their child, so they put up with an awful lot of rubbish and lies, and outwardly say they 'accept'... but they don't!). She used the usual trickery of emotional blackmail ("If you don't accept my life, then you won't see me at all", etc).

She moved to an area of London known to contain many lesbians and worked for a theatre company that later became totally lesbian. This is how most homosexuals live: they band together for self-support and a ready supply of partners. If they didn't do this, most would return

Lesbians Can (and do) Change Back to Normality

Written by K B Napier

Friday, 13 February 2015 13:52

to normality far quicker.

Jackie admits that lesbians tend to be very strident and harsh, and say they are happy when they are not. Like so many homosexuals she was unable to form a lasting relationship, and she describes her life in a lesbian community as like “being in a bubble” and whenever lesbians broke up, they all attended a ‘cushion therapy’ session with each other, when they talked for hours and made their split formal. Jackie said what any Christian knows: that lesbian relationships are ‘destructive’, and their banding-together is just a defence mechanism, used to mimic cohesion and ‘love’, as well as being a ‘sex-shop’.

Over time she became tired of the lesbian scene and its emotional roller-coaster existence, and “I’d spent too long living my life wrapped up in my sexuality”

. She says that lesbians only employ lesbian workers and lesbian friends. This, reader, is the sign of a very serious emotional and mental problem! It is a way of protecting your bad choices. You should note that whilst homosexuals employ fellow homosexuals, they legally deny non-gay employers the right to similarly restrict their employees to non-gays! They also tend to force employers to accept their pals, until nearly all the workforce are fellow homosexuals.

Note, too, that it is all about sex! (I watched a lesbian in a workplace the other day. She did not know I was observing her... though ‘married’ (!) to another lesbian, she was looking at The Star ‘newspaper’ containing pictures of nude young girl ‘models’. She was, without realising it, touching the pictures longingly, and her gaze was one that, if seen on a man, would be called lecherous! It was rather obvious what she was thinking... the only thing missing was drool dribbling from the corner of her mouth! In an attempt to deceive, lesbians pretend it is all about ‘relationships’! As other observers have said to me, “Yea, right!”... there are no genuine ‘relationships’, only shallow sexual liaisons.

When Jackie went out to clubs she would be approached by lesbian ‘police’ who insisted that she toed the official lesbian line, by not wearing lipstick or having too much fun!! She now admits this was all ‘one track’ and ‘unnatural’, and says the lesbian scene is militant, shockingly intolerant of all those who do not accept their lifestyle, and a closed world. Remember – this is her own testimony, not ours!

I have said this many times before: homosexuals create their own false ‘lifestyle’ so that they do not have to admit how unnatural their choices are, and to avoid being argued-against. If anyone

Lesbians Can (and do) Change Back to Normality

Written by K B Napier

Friday, 13 February 2015 13:52

dares to question their motives or their lifestyle, they band together and attack without mercy. And many seem 'nice' at first, even friendly! It is all deception.

And if those they attack are employed, they will try to get employers to sack them (as happened to me). Lesbian 'love' does not really exist – it is all to do with simple sex and lust. And love for others does not exist either, only hatred for anyone who stands in their way.

I have included this story to reinforce the fact that homosexuality is unnatural and false, a bad choice, and not a thing one is born to. Do not be controlled by homosexual propaganda. Speak out when you have to, and speak Biblically. You don't have to be rude or nasty; just be honest, and stay strong when under pressure to conform. (Source: Daily Mail, 7th August, 2003). (If you want serious proof from elsewhere that homosexuality is wrong and that men and women can change from being homosexual, look at www.narth.com

). This account is not unusual, it is repeated daily all around the world! Thousands change back to normality. Some change back several times before changing altogether. Very few remain in their homosexuality for life.

Read "Homosexuals are Heterophobic: Review 2005"

© August 2003

---oOo---

{loadposition btm_address}