

Finnish (lesbian) woman reveals sad state of EU rights for same-sex families

Written by K B Napier

Monday, 01 November 2010 09:45

“EUOBSERVER / BRUSSELS - The European Commission says that existing EU law on freedom of movement gives adequate protection to same-sex couples. But the story of one family (two lesbians) living in Paris shows how a mixture of confusion and prejudice is stripping some EU citizens of basic rights.....” \(28 October 2010\)

This is all so tiresome! 'Gays' say it is their 'basic right' to do this kind of thing. Who says so? Only 'gays', and those they have managed to subvert and manipulate. There is no godly 'right' to act wickedly or to go against the natural order of sexuality. If people insist on living this way, then it must be alone, without governmental support. Let these people reap the consequences of living unnaturally.

© 1 November 2010

---oOo---

{loadposition btm_address}